Dear Ron:

We have by no means forgotten your generous suggestion of annual foundation support for private international law. Shortly after our last talk with you I discussed the idea with Dean Paulsen, Em Spies (who will be Acting Dean commencing in January), Pete Low, and Richard Lillich. The latter teaches in the field. Since then we have had random conversations about ideas, and students have been brought into the discussions also.

It now appears that two ideas are emerging. I will not attempt to outline them here, as it is my understanding that you will be getting a letter in the very near future from Dean Paulsen. Since this is not my field, I have not participated heavily in the substantive discussions. My understanding is, however, that a couple of proposals will be advanced for your reaction. The hope is that you will respond and through an exchange a mutually agreeable plan can be arrived at. I do hope this is so and that some acceptable program can be developed. The ideas I have heard discussed seem reasonably good to me.

This is just a hasty note to let you know that the matter is still very much on the front burner and that you will be hearing something shortly from the Dean. It was good to talk with you while you were in this country. You must plan to include Charlottesville on your next visit.

With best wishes,

Sincerely,
