Hrs. ROSSEL (Sweden) felt, like the Uruguayan representative, that respect for human life required that a coverant on human rights should, as one of its main principles, provide for the abolition of capital punishment. As it stood, article 3 of the draft coverant approved the maintenance of that penalty in countries where it already existed. Contrary to what had been said, article 3 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights did not justify such recognition, and there should therefore be a mention of that article in paragraph 1 of the article the Commission would adopt. She thought that the words "in the execution of a sentence of a court, or" in paragraph 2 of article 3, as well as paragraphs 3 and 4, should be deleted. Sweden had abolished the death penalty by law in 1721, although it had then not been applied for a long time.

Her delegation was in favour of a mention of the Convention on Genocide, as article 3 was not in contradiction with it.

Wr. WHILAM (Australia) accorded paragraph 1 of the UCSR amendment (E/CN.4/L.122) in substitution for article 3, paragraph 1, but opposed the word "arbitrarily" in point . of the joint Children and United States amendment (E/CN.4/L.175). In reply to those who held that the use of the word "arbitrary" in article 6 justified that of "arbitrarily" in article 3, he recalled that "arbitrary" had been included in article 6 only after a long debate, and on the understanding that it would be given new consideration. As Mr. Leuterpacht had emphasized, article 3 was basic, and the word "erbitraril;" was too ambiguous to be included in it. While "arbitrary" could conceivebly be used to sublify detention or errest, it could not be applied to deprivation of life. The compromise solution in point 1 of the joint amordment was snything but an improvement on the existing text, and the fustralian delegation could not vote for it.

Mr. Helik (Tebenon) took the Chair.

The CHARREN asked whether the Commission would receive the Delgian archivent (U/CH.4/L.182) which had been submitted after the time limit for submitting amendments to the direct covenant had elapsed.

The Cormission decided to receive the emendment.

Fr. HDEDZCV (Union of Soviet Socialist Resubtice) said that his delogation, who not opposed either to the montion of the Convention on Genecide or to points 2 and 3 of the joint amendment (E/CN.4/L.176).

Fig. 16TGA (India) withdrew hor amondment (E/1992, annex III, section A), and would note in favour of the United States amendment (E/CH.k/L.130).

Fr. ECARN (thited Kinydon) associated himself with the Australian representative's remarks on the word "arbitrarily". The adoption of that word was very dangerous, as it might permit states to complain to the proposed Committee on Furan Rights at any time in respect of almost any deprivation of life which occurred in another State.

Fr. C/SSM (France) criticized the text of point 1 of the joint amendment (%/CM.4/L.176) which, instead of proclaiming the right to life, etated: "No one shall be orbitrarily deprived of his life" and consequently dealt only with relations between the State and individuals, disregarding the question of protection of life as among individuals.

The United States smendment ("/CN.4/L.130) should satisfy the Indian delegation, as it provided an equivalent for self-defence for the benefit of countries which did not recognize that concept.

He would support the Yugoslav amendments (E/CH.4/L.178,E/CH.4/L.179, E/CH.4/L.180) inserting a mention of the Convention on Genocide. Even if they were rejected, article 18 of the original text covered that Convention, which Prance had already ratified. As the existing text of article 3 had been adopted after a long discussion, it should not be altered without good cause.

Mr. SAMTA CRUZ (Chile) said that the word "arbitrarily" was intended to limit the cases of deprivation of life. He agreed that the word was vacue, but draw the Australian representative's attention to the fact that it appeared not only in article 6 of the covenant, but also in articles 12 and 15 of the Declaration, where it was used in a positive sense.

The CHAIRMIN surgested that the United Kingdom amendment (E/CN.4/L.140) should be put to the vote first, as it van further removed from the text of article 3 than the USSR amendment (E/CN.4/1.122).

Mr. MOROZOV (Union of Soviet Eccialist Republics) remerked that the USSR amendment not only had been submitted earlier than the United Kingdom amendment, but was further removed from the substance of article 3. That article contained an enumeration of exceptional cases, which the United Kingdom amendment would amplify, whereas the USSR amendment was breed on the text adopted by the Commission at its fifth session. He therefore moved that the Commission should first vote on the USSR amendment.

It was decided, by 7 votes to 2. with 8 abstentions, to vote first on the USSR amendment (E/CN.4/L.122).

The CHAIRMAN put to the vote the Yugoslav amendment (E/CN.4/L.179) to the USSR emendment (E/CN.4/L.122).

That amendment was adopted by 13 votes to 2, with 3 abstentions.

The CHAIRWAN put to the vote point 1 of the joint emendment (E/CN.4/I..176) to the USSR emendment.

Point 1 of the joint emendment was adopted by 10 votes to 5, with 3 abstentions.

The CHAINMAN put to the vote paragraph 1 of the USSA amendment (E/CH.4/L.122) as amended.

Paragraph 1 of the UNER amandment, as amended, was adopted by 12 votes to 1, with 2 abstentions.

Mr. MCHOZOV (Union of Soviet Cocialist Republics) accepted points 2 and 3 of the joint amendment (E/CS.L/L.176).

The CHALMAN put to the vote paragraphs 2 and 3 of the USCR amendment, thus arended.

Those paragraphs were adopted by 14 votes to 1, with 3 abstentions.

Mr. CASSIN (France) requested that his emendment (E/CH.L/L.160), proposing the deletion of the word "amnosty" in the first sentence of paragraph 4, might be regarded as applying to paragraph 4 of the USEs amendment which was identical with paragraph 4 of article 3 of the draft covenant.

The French amordment was adopted by 11 votes to h, with 3 abatentions.

Mr. 10x320V (Union of Soviet Socialist Republics) explained that he had realized only after the vote that the French amendment applied to the word "ammenty" in the first sentence of paragraph k. He had voted against it under the mistaken impression that the word was to be deluted in the second sentence to well.

The CHATRAVAN put to the vote paragraph b of the USSP amendment, as amended.

Paragraph 1, as areaded, was adopted by 13 votes to 1, with 4 agetentions.

Mr. JEVHHNOVIC (Yugoslavia) requested that his amountment (E/1992, annex III, section A) should be put to the vote as an emendment to the USSR text.

AZMi Buy (Egypt) caked the Yumahav representative to revise his amendment to read: "Sentence of death shall not be put into effect where the sentence concerns a pregnant voman".

Hr. JEVREMOVIC (Yugoslavia) accepted that change.

Fr. NISOT (Belgium) pointed out that the amendment could be taken either literally or as applying solely to the period preceding cuild-birth.

Fr. HCAPE (United Kingdom) felt that the sentence should read:
"Sentence of death shall not be carried out on a pregnant woman".

Itr. JEVRENOVIC (Yugoslavia) accepted that drafting change.

The Yugoslav ameriment was adopted by 12 votes to 1, with 5 abstantions.

The new article 3, as a whole, was adopted by 11 votes to 4, with 3 abstentions.

Pr. KYKCU (Greece) explained that he had voted for most paragraphs in the article, but that, for reasons he had given earlier, he had voted against the text as a whole. He preferred the old text of article 3 with a few amendments

hr. CASCH (France) had been regretfully compelled to vote against the new article 3, feeling that the text, while appearing to safeguard the right to life, in fact permitted violations of that right. He hoped that the article would be changed subsequently.

ir. FORTEZA (Uruguay) had voted against the article and all the amendments to it, in spite of the fact that his delegation was not opposed to some of them, because by that text the Commission had sanctioned the reprehensible principle that the death penalty was purniscible.

Kr. JEVREMOVIC (Yugoslavia) had vote i for the article as a whole, but retained certain doubts as regards the word "arbitrarily" and reserved the right to come back to it.

Mrs. MMITA (India) had voted against article 3 because she preferred the original text, which had been carefully drawn up; the Commission after a thorough debate.

Mr. HOARE (United Kingdom) had voted against the inclusion of the word "arbitrarily" for reasons stated previously. He had abstained in the vote on the Yugoslav sub-amendment (E/CN.4/L.179) as he had some doubt concerning the legal consequences of mentioning the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crise of Genocide in the text of the article. He had also abstained on the last two paragraphs which he thought were unnecessary. Lastly, he had felt some doubt whether he should not have voted against the article as a whole, since he fully shared the French representative's view but he had not gone beyond abstraining on the article as a whole.

Fr. WHITAM (Australia) had not voted against the text as a whole because he had not vished to oppose certain provisions of the article completely; be had therefore merely abstracted, though he fully associated himself with the French representative's retarks.

Mrs. Russil (Evoten) said that sie supported only the first part of the article which read: "Everyone's right to life shall be protected by law". The had abotained on the rest of the article which doubt with capital punishment, to which her Government was absolutely apposed.

Article 4

The CDAIRAN invited the Commission to examine article 4 of the draft coverant. He read out paragraphs 99 and 100 of document E/CN.E/5.8.

Mr. however, that its drafting was satisfactory, and felt that the first sentence of article 4, couched in general terms, sufficiently covered the special aspect of the question death of the sentence was based on the desire to prevent any rejetition of the horrible experiments carried out in the Mari concentration camps. He understood and shared the feeling of abhorrence which had caused the provision to be included; he did not think, however, that its drafting was satisfactory, and felt that the first sentence of article 4, couched in general terms, sufficiently covered the special aspect of the question dealt with in the second part of the article.

The World Health Organization and given its opinion that the phrace involved no legal obligation which was not already contained in the first gart of the article, and had emphasized the difficulty of drafting the provision in such a way as to preclude any possibility of misuse. The United Kingdom delegation shared that view. Indeed, on the one hand, the proposed prohibition was likely to stand in the way of certain perfectly logitimate scientific experiments involving only slight danger to the individuals concerned, and could therefore delay progress of medical science. On the other, it might give rise either to excessive limitations or new abuses. Thus, a surgeon, faced with a new situation while operating on an uncenscie: patient might be precluded from attempting a new technique; and on the other hand the text implied that medical experimentation which was positively required by a patient's state of health could be undertaken without his consent. That was why the United Kingdom delegation asked for the deletion of the sentence.

Mr. JEVRENOVIC (Yugoslavia) stated that the first sentence of his amendment (E/1992, annex III, section A) was designed to prevent the inducement of persons to undergo surgical operations for financial gain at the risk of serious mutilation. The second sentence of the amendment would make it possible to perform certain general experiments in special cases.

Mr. CASCIN (France) noted that there were two kinds of amendments before the Commission; those which weakened the original text of article 4, and those which strengthened it. The United Kingdom amendment (E/1992. annex III, page 30) which deleted the second sentence of article 4 was among the former. In justification of his amendment, the United Kingdom representative had pointed out that the second sentence added nothing to the first sentence of the article which was sufficiently general in scope. The United Kingdom representative's remarks in that connexion had been irrelevant. The 1 ther had spoken only about persons whose health was in danger. The medical experiments referred to in the second sentence of article 4 did not, however, apply to sick persons who were to be cared for; its purpose was to protect the healthy. If the covenant recognized the right to life, it must certainly protect healthy persons from being subjected against their will to medical or scientific experiments dangerous to their health.

Article 4 as drafted by the Cormission had been highly praised, particularly by the Committee on the Public Health of the five countries. One of the articles of its terms of reference required that medical experiments on sick persons should be of real medical importance; that they should not only be in the patient's interest, but also not involve any risk of injuring his health and lastly, that they should be carried out with his consent. Those conditions were even more essential in the case of healthy persons.

/He emphasized

He emphasized that the question was extremely important from the moral point of view. There were still a great many people in France whose localta had been integrably damped as a result of experiments to which they had been subjected in concentration cames. It was essential to prevent any recurrence of such crimical experimentation. The French delegation was therefore apposed to the United Kingdom amendment.

The Yugoslav and French anendments, (F/1992, unner III, page 30, E/CH.h/L.l.p.) on the other hand, strengthened erticle 4. The French adjustion real 2nd that to act syminat a person's will, or to act without his consent, were two different matters. The obtaining of consent use a positive condition. If it was required in the case of sick persons, there was even more reason to require it in the case of healthy ones.

Mr. HILL (World Realth Organization) said that Will had shown a deep interest at the sixth section of the Coxiderion in the provisions of articles 3 and 7 of the original fruit coverant. In the course of its consultations with the World Nedical Association and the International Council of Nurses the difficulties of article 7 had been apparent. The Director-General of the had pointed out at the time that the provisions of article 5 were adequate. Since then, articles 5 and 7 had been merged into what was now article h. Will continued to feel that the first sentence of article h adequately settled all teneral problems commented with medical and scientific experiments on human beings. The second contence might only complicate uniters and hold up the progress of medical science. Will understood and shared the feeling of horror at the experimentation carried out in the concentration camps but it believed that cortain experiments, if performed in the Iropar conditions, were necessary to scientific development.

Mr. MIGOT (Relgium), addressing in particular the Franch representative, and he feared that article & would have to be interpreted, a continuit, as permitting the surjection of a patient against his will to medical or scientific experimentation involving risk.

Mr. EOARZ (United Kingdom) agreed with the French representative on the Eucli to prevent any recurrence of the monstrous experiments carried on by the Hazis, but he thought that the first sentence of article 4 achieved that purpose. He denied that his remarks had been irrelevant. There was nothing to show that the provisions of article 4 did not apply to sick persons, as the article did not commit itself in one way or another concerning the state of health of the persons in question; consequently the second sentence applied to the sick and healthy alike.

AZMI Bey(Egypt) did not agree with the representatives of the United Kingdom and WHO who were too much concerned with sick persons. Article 4 gave full latitude for experiments on sick persons; if a person's state of health made an operation accessary, it had to be performed. He added that the United Kingdom amendment also emitted the word "cruel", which unduly limited the scope of the first sentence.

His delegation would therefore vote against the United Kinglom amendment (E/1992, annex III, page 30).

Mr. CASSIN (France) pointed out to the Belgian representative that the answer to his question was contained in article 4 itself. Cases of sick regions to be cared for would be governed by the laws on and the practices of the medical profession in the different States.

He added that some time ago the Commission had asked WHO for recommendations on how to improve the text of article 4, and the representative of that organization had merely emphasized existing differences of orinion in medical circles. The Commission should therefore retain the text as it stood unless a better one was submitted to it.

Mr. HOARE (United Kingdom) had deleted the word "cruel" in the first part of article 4 because he thought it superfluous, the word "inhuman" being already in the text. He was, however, prepared to restore it. The Egyptian representative was right in saying that organizations must be performed if necessary for the rationt's health, even if the rationt was unconscious and unable to give his consent. But the second sentence would preclude any experimental use of a new technique in the course of such operations in any case where it was not necessary required to save life.

Mr. SDEARLAN

Nr. SDEIARIAN (United States of America) thought that the French and Yapalev annulments (E/CN.4/L.150, E/1992, armex III, page 30) washared the protection afforded to individuals by article h. Indeed, a person's consent might be obtained by illegal means and even by violence. The expression "against his will" went further than the words "without his consent". The Try wills amendment might imply that a medical institution could authorize an experiment against a person's will.

Fo asked that a sorphate vote should be taken on the phrase "where such is not required by his soits of thesical or mental health".

Kr. Willichell (Cille) felt that wentiment thould not after into the discussion of logal that. The analysis of a provisions of article 4 had shown that the second sentence applied to only a special class of the treatment referred to a the first terions. The discussion should not be allowed to extend into the first of residual and adjustific expe. month, and the Commission should avoid into social legal obsents in the coverant which had nothing to do with medicine. As a logal text, the United Kingdom amendment (Z/1992, samex III, page 50) would suffice in the coverant.

The CMINAI, speaking as the representative of Lebanon, said that his delegation would vote in favour of the first sentence of article 4 which reproduced the text of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. He agreed will the United States representative that the last part of the second sentence was not necessary and might even be dangerous. The French amendment (%/cm.4/L.15) improved the text of the article, however, and the United States representative's objections might be not by adding the word "free" before the word "consent", if the French representative agreed to that charge.

The meeting rose of 1 p.m.
